we started from a different angle. The view from inside the limosine was much more pleasant than that of a school but and that unique arrival was only a beginning. When we a arrived at school, we noticed that some changes had been made during the summer. Not only did we have a new vice-principal and a new counselor but also the attendance office had also been moved, definitely a different approach to organization. Another major change was in football. On the sidelines we had a new head coach and plenty of talk in the bleachers about how our team would perform because of that change.

On the field we had new turf, which was covered nationally because of its bright blue color. Also new was approximately five hundred confused sophomores, each hurrying to make it to their class on time. The juniors had thrown away their "sophomore" status and the newly self-appointed rulers of the school, the seniors, were strutting their stuff in the halls and preparing for graduation. As the weeks rolled on, I noticed many other changes such as class sizes and clothing styles. With so many new things going on this year it was easy to take a look at Capital from a different angle.

Waiting for a command of what to do next, band members hope they remember the music they hurriedly memorized the night before.

During the week of the Western Idaho Fair, one of the most exciting sights was that seen at night looking down from the bench at the fairgrounds.

As our defense continued to fight the Meridian affense, the distant sunset fit the night of our 0-33 loss.

Making an unusual arrival on the first day of school, Jason Robertson, Todd Williams, and Greg Melander almost make coming back to school fun.

"Hey, Susan, wait up for me!" exclaimed Jill as she ran after her best friend. "Hurry up, Jill, or we'll be late for the assembly and we'll never be able to get a good seat!" As Susan and Jill rushed off to the gym, their friends, Bob and Matt joined them. "So are you chicks going to the dance next Saturday?" Bob casually asked. "Yes, we are. Are you guys?" "Ya, we're taking a couple of foreign exchange students." "Oh, that should be tun!" exclaimed Jill. "Hey, did you go to that great Oktobertest last Wednesday?" Bob and Matt nodded their heads as Jill continued, "Wasn't it great?"

One thing high school had been acclaimed for was its innumerable activities. Whether a person enjoyed dancing, music, athletics, or academics there was usually an event going on to supply fun and enjoyment for that person. Summer thru Spring there were continual events going on, many of which were approached from a different angle. For example, a new idea was to have the Homecorning Dance be of a "Fifties" theme. The school newspaper editor, Marnie Basom, asked "Why change tradition?" Tradition was broken to try out a creative new idea and the dance proved to be successful for all those who went.

As Susan, Jill, Bob, and Matt left the gymnasium they laughed as they recalled the class competitions and they also discussed the reasons why the Seniors always seemed to win.

As summer came to an end so did sleeping in and Karann Williams heavy eyelids made her aware of this fact on Senior registration day.

The varied facial expressions of Kris Imel and Denise Barsness only demonstrate the mixed emotions felt at our first football game against Meridian which we lost 0-33.

All To Ourselves

The sun is shining and the oir is sultry. Halfclad bodies are stretched out here and there, striving for the ultimate tan. This is it. This is summer, the time we've all waited for. No more pencils, no more books. No more teachers dirty looks ... " But wait, what is that in the distance? Kids are walking towards school, pencils and books in hand Where are they going? To a strange place for away A place children have nightmares of, a fear among fears. Yes, it is summer school But wait. Over here. There are more kids, sunglasses and ghetto blasters in hand Where are they going? To Lucky Peak. The closest thing to paradise we have. Where waterskiing, swimming, windsurfing and jetskiing are done and perfected. A place where then look again. There are kids in their bedrooms. What are they doing? They are packing, stuffing endless amounts of tank tops and tee-shirts into suitcases. Where are they going? On a vacation with the family, where spending money and eating too much is a way of lite, a fabulous way of life

Over the summer, most everyone did their own thing. For some people like Melanie Weidner, the school year didn't end on June 7th. "I just went to summer school. Boring, but now I have some classes out of the way." Others went to summer school to make up lost credits or just to get ahead. Some people spent their vacation in a very different way like Jenny Ross for instance who "went to Hawaii and just lazed around on the beach." For those fortunate ones, summer was a time for no work and all play.

We Wear It Well

For some, the hardest part of the day is getting ready for school. What will I wear? How should I do my hair? As I stared into my closet where a vast array of garments hung, the various colors teased my eyes. Do I want a look that's conservative, preppy, radical or maybe just something that's unique, like me?

Fads and tashions at our school did not have to tit into certain groups. We were a collage of tastes. We had locks, preppies, conservatives, radicals, and everything in between. Because there was no dress code here, people were what suited their tastes and even more, what they found comfortable,

What was hot and what was not? Well, some often worn items were long sweaters, Coca-Cola clothes, Levi jackets, Birkenstocks with socks, and of course, the legendary 501's. Some not-so-often worn items were bell bottoms, polyester, elevator shoes, and rubber

thongs

Who are our role models? Many students look to the media for their style. We saw Ma donna give up her ban gles, beads, and lace for a t-shirt, 501's and leather jacket, which in fluenced how the girls dressed. Many guys went for the "Don Johnson-Miami Vice" look. Movies also played a big part in the clothes we chose to wear.

As I looked through my closet again, I grabbed and put on my "Capital" sweatshirt and jeans and dashed to school

I was awakened from my peaceful slumber by the incessant ringing of the telephone. As I reached over to answer it I thought to myself, "Who would have the nerve to bother me in my daily after school nap?" The answer came as soon as I sleepily mumbled, "Hello?" On the other line a chipper voice replied, "Hi, this is Nancy, did you hear about Oktoberfest tonight?" Annoyed I replied curtly, "No! Why?"

Foreign language clubs and other organizations worked together for Oktoberfest- a fund-raising activity, Germany Club sold wieners on a roll and Tollberone candy bars Palmreading was done by French Club Meigs Naylor commented on Oktoberfest, "It was better than last year, more activities, more people, more fun." Another opinion from student council member, Mardi Mooney was, "We need more participation from the school to make it more successful." Katie Morris said, "I think more people should have turned out." Spanish Club also participated by selling South- of- the-border nachos. The famous bee-bee gun shoot was another great attraction by the Spanish Club. The Golden Girls sponsored a cake walk which satisfied many a sweet tooth

Still Nancy persisted, "Everyone is going to be there, even that cute guy in our Spanish class! So what do you say, do you want to go?" As I thought about it, it didn't sound half bad. We've Got Spirit

This was it, Sally thought excitedly. Here, in front of the entire student body, she was going to be acknowl edged as a senior. It was the first football assembly of the year, and finally, she would sit under the giant black and gold sign that boldly spelt out one might word.. SENIORS As she sat down, Sally wondered if things would look any different from the section reserved for the upperclassmen Would the posters bearing the word EAGLE PRIDE" and "CAPITAL PUN-ISHMENT' have any greater meaning this year? Or, better yet, would the sophomore cheerleaders rate anything more than an off-key charus of Mickey Mouse."

Due to a total of three tootball assemblies, much more variety was presented to the student body than in past years. The crowds were treated to a guest performance by the Capital Singers and various skits were put on tor everyone's entertainment. We had the usual assembly stars as well, including the Golden Girls, ASB officers, and the Pep Band, which played a rousting round of 'Tequilo' Angle Weber said that, "They the assemblies were a lot more. fun to be at! A Year That Was Lit By Liberty's Glow

The week had been a boring one and Samantha suspected the evening to be just the same. She sat down and turned on the television. There, on the screen, was the most fantastic sight she'd ever seen-thousands of ships sailing in blue water around the Statue of Liberty Maybe tonight wouldn't be so bad

For one magic moment on the fourth of July, the nation paused for a burst of patriotic pride. The Statue of Liberty topped off her one hundredth birthday with an unforgetable show it took two years and seventy-five million dollars for Lady Liberty's face lift but it was worth it. A total of 40,055 ships and boats tloated in New York Harbor. The ceremonies included five thousand homing pigeons, seventy-five gyrating Elvis look-alikes, an exuberant Reagan and six million happy onlookers. A twenty-eight minute barrage of pyrotechnics capped off the evening. The United States Constitution also celebrated its birthday this year. Two hundred years ago the Continental Congress convened to revise the Articles of Contederation, producing our Constituion. "It's really cool to see how a few pieces of parchment can hold a country together," said Charlie Harding

As the last firework died out, Samantha sat in owe of what she had just seen. The whole event truly put truth, pride and wisdom in "Made in the USA."

Taking The Fifth

Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North bit his lip and managedto hold back some tears as he spoke to the hushed hearing room. "I don't think there's another person in America that wants to tell this story as much as I do." But on the advice of his lawyer, North didn't tell the story and invoked his right not to testify under the Fifth Admendment His ex-boss, former national-secretary advisor, John Poindexter and five other figures in the scandal also avoided telling what they knew about the president's secret arms deal with Iran and the diversion of profits to fund Nicergue's con-

But what did happen that caused the most damaging scandel to hit Washington since Watergate? From open testimony, media interviews and leaked details from clased hearings, the outline of the Iran deal took clearer shape. To tell the whole complicated story would take forever so in laymen's terms, this is what happened, supposedly. Two Mideast middlemen had recruited investors with capital in Canada and the Caymen Islands to finance the deal. The money thus raised was used to pay the CIA $12.2 million for the arms, which were sold at a profit to Iran. The two middlemen told an ABC interviewer that Iran was supposed to pay a total of thirty to thirtyfive million dollars for arms but congress had yet to hear if any of the profits reached the Contras. CIA Chief, William Casey, soid under ooth that he had no idea what became of the money but other CIA officials told investigators that ten million went to buy arms for the Contras and two to three million was spent on the delivery system based at El Salvador's llopango Air Base. That left a balance of five to ten million dollars for fees and comissions. That's the somewhat official version and perhaps the truth will never be known. Many people said that's not what happened and many people, including President Reagan denied ever being a party to it.

The only sure conclusion seemed to be the one George Shultz drew, "Anyone who does something controversial in this town and thinks it can be kept secret, should have his head examined ... It's going to come out." It did, and it will

Teachers show their neverending ...

Dedication, Care

Many teachers influenced the lives of Capital students. It may have been the way they taught, or just their personal ties But many students seemed to be influenced most by the advice given to them by their teachers

Matt Martinez, for instance, said Caoch Vogel influenced his life by "Helping me not only with becoming a better football player, but also to be a better individual. He taught me to push myself in school as well as on the field, because nothing in life comes easy. The friendship and advice Coach Vogel has given me will stay with me for the rest of my life " Paul Schrecongost mentioned Mr. Thompson as his most influential teacher "Mr. Thompson is such... an effective educator simply because his students trust him. He relates with students on their own level and doesn't hide behind a stiff wardrobe or high vocabulary. He is able to motivate me, personally, with his seemingly inexhaustable transmission of energy. He is real, so his message is real. History isn't the only thing learned in his class, he also encourages students to question their own ethical and moral values while stating his own very clearly." Mrs. Thompson was chosen as well by Jeff Schaeffer "Mrs Thompson has stressed the importance of academic excellence. She has encouraged me to become the best I can and to excell at my academic pursuits."

Obviously, many other teachers also influenced their students. Capital has been known to have excellent teachers. Dedication and a lot of care is what it takes and, according to the students, there is a lot of that floating around the halls of Capital High.

It all seemed to start with changing the formal traditional Senior partraits for the year-book to semi-formal color pictures. To some it was thought of as the worst thing anyone could do.

These included things such as no more ghetto blasters in halls. study hall for students in halls too long before sixth period, moving the location of the attendance office, and some changes in the administration itself Students had some different opinions about these changes as well. Learning How was Half the Fun.

I can remember that first student council meeting. I was so nervous it was my first meeting ever, and I was unexperienced with no idea what was going to happen I began to think "Why am I on Student Council anyway? There are so many responsibilities and duties." But I was not the only unexperienced member, and that eased my mind greatly

Although we were the underdogs, the lower of the classes, we succeeded in making the best out of the pride we had Chad Cleverly, vice president, stated, "Pride is an essential factor of any student body. The sophomore class exhibits a great amount of pride towards Capital. We are proud to be Eagles and know that we belong to the best High School in the Valley. That is why the sophomores are proud to say they belong to the Class of '89" After a long year of hard work the president, Kirk Vandenhoek decided, "The Class of '89 is great for many reasons, 525 to be exact. The people are what makes us great" It did not matter that we were the underdogs, because we knew we would soon overcome "Mickey Mouse" and become Juniors. We were also confident that we were an essential part of our school

I could not believe that over half of us were unexperienced. We all put forth a great effort to guide the sophomores to be the best class imaginable and learning how to do that was half the fun

Seeing new faces, making new friends, and . . .

Creating A New Social Atmostphere

Walking down the hall in my new clothes, with a pounding heart and a nervous smile my eyes scanned the halls for new faces. Of course, being a sophomore as I am, it wasn't a difficult task Seeing all the new people triggered my impression of what kind of person hid behind each face. Somebody that surely caught my eye was an individual who had a confident stride and a sense of being. As I turned the corner I was shocked to see that I had entered Senior hall. Talk about confident strides and sense of being" (Maybe it was even a little overdone)

Each year of school we encountered new faces, but as a sophomore, Jayneie Amsden said, "Going to school was like being at the fair—I saw a lot of familiar faces but yet I noticed more new ones." Meeting new people was exciting because there were so many ways to go about it. Getting involved in sports, activities, or school work usually decided what a person's social life was like Whether a person went to parties, dances, football games, or study groups depended on what that person was involved in

Boy oh boy was I glad to be out of Senior hall! But deep inside, I couldn't wait for my chance to act, talk, and walk as the Seniors did

You've got yourself a big job trying to live up to what he did. In fact, I remember once, just after I had given a test..." "Great," Deb thought. "I hate being known as 'Bill's Little Sister Everywhere I go I get that title Why can't I just be known as Deb Allumbaugh?" Deb leaned back in her chair as her teacher rambled on about her older brother Did this sound as familiar to you as it did to so many other sophomores with older brothers or sisters who had walked down Capital's hallowed halls before them? Unlike Deb some didn't mind having older siblings at same school. One sophomore said, "I love going to school with my sister because I know!

always have a friend But some aren't as luck. Another sophomore had this to say, "All of my sister's friends always bug me."

The belirang and Deb got up to leave As she went leaving her teacher stapped her "I'm sure you'll be just as great as Bill ... Deb "Deb left the classroom with a smile

On Those Extremely Intriguing Magazines

I strutted into the Circle K during my lunch hour and quickly gathered together some lunch munchies. Then I zoomed over to the magazines, I was amazed with how many there were. Leaning up against the shelf next to me was a very attractive girl, looking at a magazine about clothes designs. It looked like Vogue or Seventeen. As I fumbled through the other magazines a certain cover caught my eye, the swimsuit issue of Sports illustrated. I grabbed it and looked through it. As I fantasized over the contents of this issue, time rushed by rapidly. I forgot all about school and being back on time until the girls beside me asked me what time it was. I glanced at my watch and answered her. "Five minutes to one." I went back to my magazine, then it hit me I was going to be late again. I decided to buy a magazine that was a little more educational I grabbed a magazine about NFL football and went to the counter to pay for my junk. Then I ran back to school making it to my class room just before the bell rang

Trying to bring student body together proves

StuCo. Is No Secret

StuCo The first time I heard the term, I thought it was something you could find in the Sophomore locker room. Next I thought it was what you call old gum on your shoe. But in actuality it means Student Council Those studmuthins that bring you the latest in Gurka faries and lion hunts. They decorate for dances, and create new and fun activities throughout the year.

This year the Student Council helped to raise money for the United Way by sponsoring a date auction. For this, people volunteered to be auctioned off for dates to the mixer dance. With all the proceeds raised, the United Way received over $1000 more than lost year.

This was also the first time in the last three years that the Student Council has actually pulled together and managed to bring us a bonfire

New ideas weren't the only goals of the Student Council They were actively trying to bring more of the student body together. They were trying to involve as many students as possible, and they also encouraged student participation because they couldn't do it all

Their inner council goals were to be more organized and more creative than the year before. Kurt Kelson states that, "This was my first year on Student Council, and so it was a new expenence for me. There's a lot of social interaction, but there's plenty of work to do. But all in all it's a lot of fun." He also encouraged all to get involved.

Crowded Halls and Classrooms

The first day of school arrived and Peter got up early, as he wanted to get to school in plenty of time to get a good parking spot. When he arrived, much to Peter's surprise, the parking lot was almost completely full. "Gee whiz! It's only 7:45 and already I've got to hunt for a parking spot." When he entered the building, he noticed the halls were really crowded. The bell rang for first period to start and Peter walked into his Honors English class. Unable to find a desk, Peter was assigned a "seat" on the radiator until a desk could be moved in Many of the Juniors and Seniors couldn't could not believe their eyes at the increase of students this year. The Junior class, with 524 people was considered big and many crowding problems occurred. The Sophomore class was even bigger which caused crowding problems in the halls. Classes averaged between 25-30 students and that was enough to discourage many. Health and Reading classes were the most crowded because of the new requirements. Even though students had five minutes between classes, many found it even more difficult to make it on time with all the people in the halls. "I hate it when really slow people are in your way or the ones that just stop right in front of you." complained Darin Scruggs.

Peter wondered if he would ever get a real desk but he looked on the bright side "At least I'll be warm in the winter"

"Wow!" Spencer thought to himself as he drove across the parking lot. "There is really something different this year. I'm not bounding up and down. My shocks are still attacked to my car!" After Spencer parked his car and got out, he stood there for a moment Surrounding him was a great black desert with yellow lines. "I knew there was something different!" exclaimed Spencer. "They paved the parking lot during the summer!"

A great change occurred during the summer while most of us were enjoying our summer vacations. After many years of cold winters and sweltering summers, the old asphalt was recovered with a new surface

Cars wouldn't be brutally beaten up as they drove over the potholes. Students who drove wouldn't have to wonder where the parking lines were

A replica of a football field was also painted on the new surface. This allowed the band to practice as if they were really on a field with the yard lines visible

Lissa Riebs sarcastically remarked, "The Golden Girls take up too much of the parking lot and don't leave nearly enough room for the rest of Capital to park their automobiles."

"Now it's our school colors" Lisa Clark jokingly replied

Deran Watt replied, "It's nice and black!" As Spencer walked to the doors of the school building he reassured himself that his car was in okay hands

It was the first day of school and as Jane entered those familiar doors she felt something different. Through all of her classes and at lunch, she knew that somehow things had changed over the summer. There was something significantly different about all of her friends and the general feeling about the school this year

It was a new sense of belonging A secure feeling generated by being a rung higher than the year before. There was more mutual respect with the senior class and a hearty chuckle for the new herd of sophomores.

It was the year of the Mickey Mouse syndrome But that had all ended and she was now a junior and it was okay to be a snob, after all you're only a junior once Seniors didn't seem so scary anymore and they actually turned out to be really nice people

Julie just turned on the tube as Sluthe was about to force Liono - lord of the Thundercats - over the edge of Hook Mountain Liono reached down and grasped the mighty Sword of Omens. As he whirled the sword above his head he yelled, "Thunder! Thunder! Thundercats Ho!" A red beam from the Eye of Thundera shot through the sky summoning the other Thundercats. Tigra, Panthro, Cheetara, Willey Kit and Willey Cat, and Snarf jumped in the Thundertank and sped for Hook Mountain to save Liono from the evil mutants and their leader Mumra.

Does this sound familiar? Many students partook in the afterschool pastime of watching television. For some, this was an important break from school, until study time

Some popular afterschool shows were Facts of Life, Peoples Court, Divorce Court, G.I. Joe, and Thundercats A missed show was Days of Our Lives which this year was moved up 2 hours, thus making it impossible to watch Heather Hodgins said, "I think they'll lose a lot of good ratings."

Some students choose not to watch at all, thinking the shows were trival. While others were busy with sports or other after school activities.

All of a sudden Julie remembered that she was supposed to be doing her homework. She pulled herself away from the television set and back to her Math assignment

They throw on some clothes and head for the student council room where they prepare themselves for an important task to create some excitement for the senior class By 7.15 all six, now fully awake, are assembled and eagerly ready to exchange and contribute their ideas for upcoming events. One thing's for sure . . .

It Takes Big Bucks

Many of us have experienced a feeting of despair when it seems impossible to obtain all the things we absolutely deem necessary to survive. Of course, what we usually desire has nothing to do with survival. That revelation came to me one day when I knew I would have to earn my own money. I thought, "Wow! At $3.35 on hour, it will take me twenty years to purchase a new or even used 924 Porsche turbo, and by that time the car would be an antique "I learned then not to set my immediate goals so high and settled for a Moped. I would also like to obtain a college education. That also takes a lot of money. I'm praying for financial aid.

I now work weird hours and all the sounds I used to enjoy like cool mountain streams and tennis balls hitting my racket are now replaced by "Four macs, extra cheese, no onions, how long will that take?"

It's a great experience to earn my own money but it has also taught me that I don't intend to be a shart order cook the rest of my life as I still intend to own that Porsche If you don't have a rich relative, those big bucks won't come your way without a good education. It was a dark and stormy night and the lightning flashed outside the window Water ran in little rivulets down the faggy panes of glass. Stan stared at the television blaring in front of him, realizing that this was it. Here he was, 18, and alone

Every year more and more students packed it off to the University before they entered the working world. There they chose a major and narrowed their course load into classes which would directly benefit their future. Many students would travel across the country to enroll in the college of their choice, while others would even travel abroad to pursue their education. Wherever the school, life-after-high school was without morn and dad. Most students, like Lisa Gabbert and Raine living, were going to find the change difficult and would miss their family and friends terribly.

Bruce slammed his locker closed and headed for his class. It was his most interesting class of the day It wasn't the subject that intrigued him it was the mixture of "cliques" that made up the class. There was jocks, bandos, punkers, nerds, weirdos, wastoids, and new waves. Bruce, instead of listening to the lecture, would usually listen to the conversation being exchange in each group, needless to say provided a very interesting hour

Cliques. What are they? A clique is a didn't get a chance to meet as many group of people who are always together. They eat together, date one another, laugh with each other, study together and go out together. Some people feel that cliques are all right. Look At Us Now

Summer had finally come and I was enjoying the relaxation quite thoroughly. When I went out to the mailbox I discovered a reminder of school-my second semester report card. I opened it not only to find my grades but also a notice. The notice told me there was going to be a change my senior year. My senior pictures were not only due at a hideously early date but our senior.

yearbook pictures were not following tradition! I couldn't believe it. Who had the nerve to tell mel couldn't wear a tux or a drape in my senior picture? As I read the notice further it said the pictures would be in color-hmmm, that didn't sound too bad, and at the bottom it said "Questions?-Call Margo Cooke." That answered my question, Margo must have broken the tradition. I remember someone telling me she was the editor of the yearbook and now that I think of it I remember there was even a petition going around to get her to change back to tradition. I guess it didn't succeed. Oh well, I suppose there is nothing I can do about it

Our Future lies ahead . . .

Now That It's Over

It seemed only yesterday when we felt - conquer life's problems and make our scared and apprehensive about entering high school. It was a time for new friends, thrilling football games, dances and, more important, a chance to discover where our ambitions would really take us. Where does our future lie now that it's over? Countless memories linger in our past while thoughts of tomorrows to come fill our minds with gues-

dreams come true? As we ponder our fate make a promise to yourself, a promise to strive your hardest and achieve the goals and expectations desired because you and only you can make them come true. Remember: Life is not measured in time. It is measured in the joys and sorrows that each day brings For yesterday is the past and totions. Will we make it alone? Will we morrow the present, so live each day to the fullest for they last no more or no less than a blink of an eye Each of us makes our own decisions and future We must always live so that we are deserving of a good future. We make the choices. We can live in one of two ways Henry King described these ways best when he said: "like to the falling of a star; Or as the the flights of eagles are."

Thank you, The End

Every good movie has a happy ending. The ending is what makes it good. The bad guy is defeated, the hero gets his girl and all is right in the world. A person's high school years can be likened to that kind of movie. Sophomores, the bit actors or extras. may not be acknowledged but they help fill up the scene, they take the emptiness away. Soon they will be juniors, the happy-golucky sidekicks. A person's junior year is usually their "freest," There isn't graduation or college to worry about and they already know their way ground the school, And soon the juniors will be the heros, the seniors Looked up to and respected, it's the seniors who try to set the school right. They provide encouragement to the underclassmen and, in turn, become role models

The seniors, like the heros, ride off into the sunset, with new places to see and goals to accomplish ahead of them

All these parts make up one movie and one school. Every individual helps to make up the whole. Every individual contributes to the picture With the help of the director/principal and the propinen, make-up people, stuntmen, and other necessary stage people/teachers, each person can achieve success. Those people are there to help us, so let them

As the hero gently pulls the girl to sit with him on the horse and ride off into the sunset, he tips his hat to everyone, the extras, the sidekick, the director, and the stage people. He's saying thank you and, as seniors, so are we

One area we certainly were well noted for was our outstanding "Arts" abilities. "This is my second year in band and thave not only enjoyed winning District ill both years but also will always. cherish the triendships I have made "stated Andrea Peckham. Not only did judges award us for having the number one band and drift team in Idaho but also we were highly acc aimed for our choirs, such as the Singers, the drama department, and the orchestra. Being in orchestra for three years has had its rewards such as the special triends I have made "commented Rose Bean, We wanted to approach these highly accidimed and to ented organizations from a different angle and give them the credit they deserve by creating a section of their own the ARTS

I gave the director an exasperated grimace as he told me again to project my voice. I had been projecting, rehearsing and singing for over two and a half hours and I was ready to go home! But I knew that for our production to be the best. the time would have to go unaccounted for, and the energy must be unending!

"I made it!" I made it!" Shrills of excitement filled the halls as the estatic new members of Capital Singers dreamt of the oncoming year. "I've always dreamt of being in Capital Singers ever since I heard of them. Now I finally am," quotes Cyndy Andersen, Many students seemed to look up to Singers members it's a goal to push and aim toward.

Capital Singers had some goals of their own to aim for. As January rolled around, Jazz Festivals lingered in the distant future. District III arrived on February 5, and Moscow on February 27. Adjusting from the busy Christmas season, with more than 15 performances in 21 days, took alot of work and patience.

Preparation is the key to a good chair. Hours of dedication and determination all go into having a 1st rate performance. After performing for the IEA Convention at the Red Lion on January 9, it was apparent that a lot of work was needed for that wanted perfection. While Shane and Frank practiced in the mens restroom, Pat and John shook hands with the guests, and Don, Jon, & Matt made sure everything was set up okay, the rest of the Singers prepared themselves mentally for the upcoming show. "A lot of the people that come into the bathroom enjoyed us!" said Frank Young,

trumpet player

Other choir members were know to have said, "Let's just beat Capital this year!" Melissa Culpepper remarked, "They want revenge, we want success " And that's exactly what they worked for, "Capital Singers to me has been a way to express the Capital Code of Excellence—there's nothing that can compare to the closeness that you feel. Hopefully I have done my best to keep up the tradition," expresses Martin Prows. Shane Russell, alto saxophone player, felt that "Singers is a great opportunity for us band people like myself and Frank Young, to get involved with the sing ing aspect of the music department "

Paul Seideman replied that, "It really gives you a chance to be important Eveyone is as valuable as everyone else" And Don Allers, president, soid that, "The experences we gain from Capital Singers and the people involved are involuable. The group becomes so close throughout the year that the satisfaction of being the best comes less from the success itself than from the people we're sharing it with"

Tears trickled down the cheeks of the members as hugs were exchanged between 31 people who were now formily—singing in harmony forever; in their voices AND hearts practice marching. They endured the cold, the rain, and the long hours of practice that were necessary to make an award winning band. To some people this type of dedication was unbelievable Take for instance the newest members of the Capital band, the sophomores When they were at Fairmont or Hillside they had to do only a fraction of the work that they were doing at Capital, It was a big adjustment for them but they thought the effort was well worth the reword. One sophomore, for instance, which felt that way was Lisa Martin, "Although being in the band was hard work, we were rewarded by the exhiloration of learning a challenging new piece and meeting new friends." But being in the band wasn't all hard work. There were also parties and other social gatherings. But most of all there was support When Joy and Sasha died all the band gneved, and oil the members of the band supported each other and tried to cheer each other up. They put in the time and the effort for a reason. School pride was that reason. A person could see that pride in the way they marched and played

Finally the practice is over and the band breaks up. After marching and playing for two solid hours the band is really ready for a rest. They retire to the band room to put away their instruments. Once in the band room the conversation is light and the fotigue is evident. After their instruments are put away. They get into their cars and head for home to do homework, watch t.v., or just to sleep

Morning Torture

Flinging the alarm across the room, I force my weary body from bed and clear the sleep from my eyes, focusing on the familiar surroundings. I still can't believe I have awaken at this ungodly hour to prepare for the morning torture ahead...

With new additions the football drill team excelled in all areas, showing traditional determination and pride which persisted throughout the season. And the Golden Girls weren't the only ones to "get into the act." G.G mothers Nancy Grigsby, Myra Frisbee, Paula Durand, Clydene Black, Becky Call, Julie Tueller, Sue Johnson and Lucy Hanson were a terrific help in their routines which used flags and the new white skirts. The skirts were a positive addition as the marching unit went to Spokane in early October and placed third in a multi-state competition, also including teoms from Canada, Upon return, the girls had four days to prepare for District III on October sixteenth, in which they went all the way for first place. One of the hardest things the G G.'s defeated was a lack of unity at the beginning of the year Dunng the Spokone competition, they were able to pull together and proceeded to excel. overcoming personal differences. G G Kelly Watts summed up her feelings on unity by saying, "The reward of being the best doesn't mean anything without the pride and unity of both the band and drill team as a marching unit

As my thoughts became more alert, I realized the reason ing behind the mad ness - we were number one, and part of staying on top was enduring the morning torture.

SPORTS

When it comes to sports, people know I am the one to come to I know everything there is to know about Capita High Schools Athletic teams. Yes that is correct am known as John John, the professional spectator. Besides sophomore P.E. I have never played sports but I have attended most all of the events and let me tell you, plenty of teams, games, strategies, and procedures were approached from a different angle this year.

At the top of the list of changes in sports was the Varsity Football team. The team had a new coach to ignicompetition and represented which edithem to an extremely challenging season. From another angle, it was exhibiting to see soccer finally get kicking full force in high school competition. The girls and guys soccer teams overwhelmed the competition by taking some top positions in city ratings. Something which received more attention, coverage and players was the Hockey. Team which added a wider variety to the sports curriculum. For more information concerning the different angles which were approached in sports—turn the page.

Once again she joined the five other cheerleaders as the band performed another effusuive performance of "Tequila" that left her breathless. Nothing like being a cheerleader, she thought, to improve your resting heart-rate.

The Sophomore and Varsity cheerleaders had the charisma and spirit to encourage our teams through win or loss. Through pep railies, a bonfire, and the various athletic activities, the girls exuded Eagle pride, and led the Statistics' Statistics' Statistics! How can any one enjoy a good baskball game when his main concern is the recording of shots, rebounds turnovers, and other game trivia? The onswer is very ensity! One not only enjoys the superficial flow of the game, but also the degree to which the mechanics of the game are executed When a balplayer per forms below par, it is duly noted. When a ballplay. performs exceptionally well it is also duly noted.

During the holftim statistics aid in the map ping of second half strate. gies. They re also utilized by the couching staff to better prepare the feam for future competition. Asa result, the reliability of the collected statistics must be extremely high II they were not, they would be of little use to the coaches and could even jeopardize the future p Europea of an individual player. Being a statistician is a weighty responsibility.

Fortunately for Capital High School, we have three outstanding student statisticians Doug Euger Jason Eck, and Matt Martinez. They have followed the Varsity basketball team from Pendleton to Carson City They have kept for not only the Varsity games, but also many JV and Sophomore games Doug, Josen, and Matt have done a great job for Capital's basketball program over the last two years. The Capital gym sits quiet ly now, serene. Little goes on in there except an occassional Sophomore P.E. class. And yet, but a few months ago, the hallowed walls quivered from the screaming fans, chanting cheerleaders hysterical coaches, and blaring music from the pep band. The air still carries faint traces of popcorn, soda and that omnipresent odor of twenty-two years of sweat.

To the players, however, the entire scene congeals into one mass of General chaos

The guy's Varsity bas ketball season also could be considered with that cate gory, as it masses itself in the minds of players and fans, but then again perhaps things went a bit deeper than that. The season did reveal its share of highs and lows and Senior Eric St. Michell soid, "We played better as a team as the season progressed." The Eagles ended their season with an 7-13 record as they played against tough teams from both Idaho and the surrounding states. The record did not reveal the many tough losses, especially against Meridian as we took the Warriors into two overtimes before the team beat us 72-74. Our best showing.

Capital's 1986-87 Girl's Busk etball. Team was biessed with tolent and experience. After two tough opening road trips to Idoho Falls, Sondpoint, and Caeur d'Atene and Lewiston, the Eagles settled into league play and finished with a 9-3 record, good enough for second place.

In the district tournament we finished third winning the final game over Bone by one paint. This qualified as for a play off spot against Lewiston.

On Saturday, February 14th, the Engles overged an earlier loss to Lewiston by defeating them 60.59 on a lost second shot by Karen Bain. This win earned the Team a birth nto the 1987 State Tour purior 1.

The success of this year's team was because of team effort. Everyone , ayed everyone contributed it was a fun year.

The Varsity Girl's Basket ball team began their success with a tremendous win in their first game against Skyline in mid November

The beginning of the season was marked by some worry because the team members were generally young and with little experience working with one onother. They started their season on the road with only six of their nineteen games this season scheduled for home Out of the four seniors on the team two were returning seniors, and one had transferred—they had a really good time felt that they had a good have fun and we win and team but they didn't realize their real potential until after their first game when they smoked Skyline by twenty points. It wasn't until then that they realized that it would be a fantastic season

The team was really impressed by the support they received from the student body this year It helped the team to a successful season to have not only parents cheering them on but also a school that cared

As an overview they were excited for the season and from another school. They As Rose Bean put it, "We that's the best combination you can have." And to top it off, the team came out of the season with a 12-7 win loss record

The team's main weak points were that they were plagued by injuries through out the season. But this disadvantage was greatly outweighed by the strong points. They didn't really have a bench All of the players were very good and everyone was a starter. To sum it all up they had a very successful season in terms of a workable team that could handle the struggles that were thrown to them

Sarah was tense. The worst part of benchwarming, except for the inevitable pain after long periods of sitting, was the ever-present possibility that one might receive a chance to take the floor. Not that many of the fledging Eagles had much practice in this area, a great effort was put forth by everyone on both the teams.

The Sophomores had an excellent season, lasin only two games and capturing the district championship. As the Sophomores stralled to the championship, the J.V fought their own battles against tough teams from throughout the area. Junior Katrina Corn said, "Everybody on the team played at their best and we played very

The Varsity "men" of this year's baseball team were ready to go with three returning starters to lead the team to victory. These three were Don Acree: catcher, Mike Keller; outfielder, and Pat Lee, infielder. Many of the players had played on teams outside of school over the summer and returned ready and able to play well. The spirit was high and a feeling of team togetherness generated There was an attitude of winners, and a confidence held strongly by past glones They returned this season prepared to surpass this with on even greater record Last season the team went to state and took third. This year they planned to take first.

Practice started in late January and the first game was scheduled for MARCH 13 Capital went up against the area teams, Boise, Borah, Meridiaampa and Mountain Home, and they found that Meridian and Boroh were the toughest teams that they hit Last year they held a 3-1 record with Meridian and a 2-2 record with Borah, Another region that they expected tighter competition with were a few teams out of Oregon But state competition was the primary goal. If they could break into state it would be for the fourth consecutive year. The Eagles had a spirit about them that was undoubtedly Capital style Success followed them no matter how they did with the season

Overall the team felt confident that they had a good defense and that they should do well. There were a lot of seniors on the team and they felt that last year's lack of motivation could and would improve as their experience grew.

The Sophomore baseball team was expected to follow the trend of the rest of the sophomore teams and to excell in their first attempts. Though they had not played on school organized teams, many of the players had played outside of school and over the summer and came well prepared for the task that lay ahead of them. They as sophomores had a reputation as an overall talented class, and this was one sport they would not lack in Many of the players had played on the Babe Ruth All-Stars in junior high. This gave them reason to believe that they were able to work well together. There was some obvious talent coming from the sophomores and a prospective outlook was in line

The Sophomores started practice in late January and the first game was scheduled for the middle of March They began the season in high spirits. Team motivation was high and although they couldn't be sure of how they would do, they felt confident and thought positively

They had all of the elements and the season was bound to be a huge success. They were ready to take an all that came at them with flying colors The Sophomore Baseball team had a most suc cessful season in recent years due to a lot of taient combined with a great attitude. Many of this season's players have also participated in summer All-Star teams.

The strengths on the season will rely on sould detense and a consistant patching rotation. Many of the players were able to fill in various positions when needed.

With a twenty game schedule and a District tournament, the Sophomores will gain valuable expenence for next year's Varsity season

Took Their Glory

For their long hours of working and lots of determination.

The high pitched squeak of skin sliding across the gym floor, the sharp smack of a stricken ball, and the salty hot smell that accompanies hard work and it's sweat, paints well the picture of the Varsity Valleyball team's daily toil

The team got an early start in August when they began their ritual of labor. The on court battles they fought were the proving factor of their growth and improvement. Spirit and skill were ranked high among the teams many great features

Though all of their games could not be wins, they put up a fight each time. As Kris limel put it, "We had the skill to be the best in the district, but we lacked in mental preparation."

August 26 was the first game of the season and their hard work payed off. Starting off on the right foot, the Eagles came through with a home game win against Fruitland. Their next game, against Mendian, on September 4, was a loss, but they came back on September 30 and scalped the Warnors to show them who was really boss

The team had its ups and downs throughout the year, but they proved themselves repeatedly as one of the able, willing teams-traditional of Capital High

The team put in the work that it takes to be the best. They went into the season taking what they went into it for and that was to gain skill and experience to grow and learn by. With that in mind, the year was success, and a triumph for Capital High School

The Sophomore Volley-ball Season was one of many accomp ishments for the women involved. We worked to improve our skills in 3 areas—serving, passing and setting. By seasons end all 11 of the young ladies were able to serve overhand which was our goal. We defeated each team in our league at least once except Nampa who we lost to in 3 sets.

We finished fourth in the STC Tournament held at Borah Each girl played in every game which was our goal at the start of the season.

In conclusion I feel the young women involved in Sophomore Volleyball improved their basic skills and made many friend ships that will last for years. We had fun, worked hard and met success.

I hopped out of my car and headed toward the green field edged by brightly unitormed players and enthusiastic spectators. So this was soccer, I thought wonderingly-curious to see what made the game so popular

The Girl's soccer team entered their season with the prestige of two consecutive State Championships. Probably the most feared team in the state, the Eagle soccer team was indeed a force to be reckaned with After walking over every earn in their path, remaining undefeated for the third straight year, the girls looked forward to their trip to State; the Seniors especially wanted to end their final season in a glaze of glory. But they were disappointed

The lady Eagles fell to the opportunistic Mendian Warners in a hard fought play-off match Despite our dominating the majority of the game, Meridian took advantage of their tew possessions and managed to hold us back

All was not lost however, Senior Marnie Basom commented, "Although we didn't take state, which was very disappointing, this soccer season has brought me many new friends and has taught me many valuable lessons which will always apply to the future "

As the minutes ticked by I became more and more engrossed in this game Incredible speed and agility was required by the players to perform their best Ignorant as I was about the game, I knew our team had all these qualities, along with determination and desire to succeed

1986 was a very positive tor Varsity soccer team. We had severat goels to accomplish and while we did not reach our ultimate gool at winning the State Championship we did take second place and field for first for City Championship.

While there was great individual play by all of the players, the team effort that they displayed should be congratulated

This year Capital dominated the all metro team with four players being named The players were Jesse Chrumblo, Sr., Bers Pundey Jr., Mike Thomas. Jr., and John Hatten, Jr. Naminated to the honor uble mention team were David Fornander, Jr., and Paul Lambert Jr.

There was a heated controversy between the two teams over questionable calls by the officials and poor sportsmanship displayed by both sides

Joe readied himself to putt, this shot meant it all He gently tapped the ball and followed through with perfect form, but his swing was just a little too hard and the ball rolled past the hole and halted only inches away from its target.

... students also enjoy individual sports.

Many students this year were involved in sports out side of school. Sports that weren't an organized part of the ordinary school extracurricular activities. These "unorganized sports" were a big part of some students lives.

Several students were in volved in swim team, wa terskiing, and even life-guarding. There are those who windsurfed, jetskied cliftdove, and a wide variety of other water sports. Many chose to play hackey sac, frisbee, croquet, darts, pool, and horsebackriding.

A sport that rapidly gained recognition among some students was skateboard ing, in all of these sports there were those who specialized and gained precision, and some students began to gain individual recognition

Students participated in individual and unorganized sports because they gave the participants a chance to expand their own interest without neccessarily putting them under the stress of competition. Some of the sports were competitive, but not as teams sports, such as race car driving, horse racing and marathon running. This gave the individual the opportunity to work on his own skills and particular interests in what ever the students reason for participating.

Everyone it seems was involved in some sort of individual or unorganized sport. Whether it was for tight competition or just a funtime together with friends, they were part of many students' lifestyles and they will committee to keep people actively together in the future.

The Art of Argument

Daily Debate

As I entered the JV and Varsity de bate classes, I was overwhelmed by the scene. Everyone was comforting Sara Pursly and Jenny Roy about the most recent loss of their car keys. Craig Lysne and Jim Wood were expanding their intellectual horizons by means of crossword puzzles. They all gathered together in their natural state, Casually lounging upon one another ready to present their story, I said, "All right guys, let's talk" That was a stupid thing to say They all started in at once, doing what they're best at, talking about everything and anything I finally managed to get their ottention again, and began. When the first question was posed be fore the group, "What does it take to be a successful debater?" Mr Ol son knew the onswer "Debate is like a sewer You get out of it what you put into it " Cheri Cortois agreed saying, "A lot of time and effort "This was quickly refuted by Sara Pursley who said, "No." You just need a halfway high I O "Rainey Irving decided from her past experiences that "Nice legs detinitely help " Jenny Roy's frank and to the point "No morals." This was getting interesting. These were not the type of people I had expected. You know the kınd, glasses, greasy hair, a GPA beyond belief, and that notorious briefcase Their language was nottoreign, and unintelligible either. They were actually human. Normal people just joking around. I began to see this even more when I presented my next question, "How has debate changed your life?" "Debate is not like a regular class, it falls into the center of your life. You life actually revolves around your debate schedule," was Kathi Pearce's responce. The group agreed on one point, "Because you rely on everybody for evidence and support, you become like one big family." Jim looked away from his puzzel, and said with a grin, "Yeah, we share everything, even our briefs"

I could tell that these were definitely fun people with quick minds. They were joined together by common interest of argumentation. The group in a final surge of agreement noted that Seriously, debate teaches a person to look objectively at the world and make acurate judgements with some impact.

Great Flight

Hector Lector raced into the Flight Staff room, his heart beating faster than a bolt of lightening, sweat pouring down his skinny face like water from faucets. "I want this letter published in tomorrow's paper!" he demand ed to the editor. "This is a very important letter," he continued, "discussing the ratio of boys to girls and I strongly believe each student who attends this wonderfully structured, highly rated shool should be aware of the statistics Fur-r-r-thermore," now getting aroused, "H-H think it's important because if we, as a school, are to have a group activity everyone should have a partner so no one will be left out. Now," pushing his glasses from the middle of his nose back between his beady little eyes, "what do you think of that?" "I think you are insone," onswered the editor, "However, we will do it for you "...

"As deadlines neared, panic, stress, and fear overcome the entire staff room" stated editor Marnie Basom. Margaret Callao also said, "Hectic! The sports' stories seemed to be thelast ones to come in and it would seem as though we only had a couple of days to put together a decent section." "The staff seemed unique in the way that the entire group really came togerher to make each separate section one newspaper. It seemed before Flight was just five or six defferent sections working to compose a great paper-it just doesn't work that way," added Marnie Basom It appeared everyone was willing to write last minute stories and lay out copy and staff members agreed that was what made a difference when it come to meeting deadlines. Their ability to create. an interesting Flight was exemplified when anxious faces smiled at the delivery each month

"I knew this staff was the greatest" exclaimed Hector. "However, I do deserve the credit for creating the story." he boasted, obviously proud of his britiant idea. The staff stared at Hector amazingly as he strutted out the door

I couldn't beheve it' How could they expect me to sit down and write something about I knew nothing about? I had been working on this story for days and everything I wrote turned out to be fit for the garbage can. Why had I signed up for this class in the first place? I thought Yearbook would be all fun and games, but so far all I have done is work, work, work, drawing layouts, making pictures fit and thinking up caption after caption While many people were diligently worked on their English essays, balancing equations in Chemistry or even conjugating verbs in French, the Yearbook staff room bustled with activity Editors proof read, photographers snapped camera after camera, and staff members added the last minute touches to their layouts that would soon become the reality at the end of the year From the first day of the school until the final deadline on February 27, the Talon staff put forth a great effort to make this Yearbook the best it could have possibly been. "This is a class to be remembered," said Hans Atkins. This class would, in fact, cherished by all. The continuous hard work everyone had contributed seemed to pay off in the end. In addition new friends were made and fun times were spent to form lasting memories, "It's hard work but it's fun," Heather Hodges remarked. I finally finished my story, layout, and captions and actually had fun in the process! Yearbook turned out to be my favorite class on I learned a lot. As I sat taking my last final; in the midst of stress, fatigue, and confusion; my mind accidentally wandered and it occurred to me, not only was this my last final of the year but it was also the last final of my high school career. My mouth gaped open as I comprehended the meaning of that thought.

The school year of 1986-87 held many changes, traditions, and experiences which were approached from a different angle, by and for everyone who was involved with life itself. Friendships were built and friendships were lost, but the moments and memories shared, were worth the cost. The end of old experiences could have only marked the beginning of new ones. As one third of the Eagles moved onto new and different ways and means of life, two thirds remained to carry on Bussiness as usual at Capital. Whether they chose to attempt new ideas or carry out old traditions it was up to them. As for us, we viewed life from a different angle and chose our own paths to take.

As my mind came back to the test in front of me, I decided I could finish remeniscing later because if I did not concentrate on this final right now—it might not be my last!
